New Year, New Hope

By: Lydia Dokken
Staff Reporter

As 2021 rolls in, many people are glad to leave the struggles and stresses of 2020 behind. After the stresses of a pandemic-caused quarantine, the cancellation of so many events and a year full of wildfires, plane crashes, political discourse and a global economic recession, you could understand how the end of 2020 is something worth celebrating. And while the changing of our calendars may not prevent further catastrophe, people are hopeful this coming year will instead be a year of progress and recovery. I was originally going to ask people about their new year's resolutions, but since those never last anyway, I decided to ask a couple people about what they hope will change this year.

One person I interviewed, who would prefer to remain anonymous, told me they hope that in the new year, people will become more open-minded and respectful of people who are different from themselves.

Another person I interviewed, James "Jamie" Jamieson, said he hopes to better himself in the new year. He wants to become a better person and help people by giving to charity.

I also interviewed Mrs. Sheryl Walker. She hopes this year will be a year of moving forward. She hopes we can combat the pandemic and see more kindness and unity in our nation.

Freshman Learning the Ropes of High School

By Collin Sager
Staff Reporter

The freshmen are in their first year of high school and adapting each day to the ins and outs of high school.

It is a big step to go from junior high to high school. They have a lot more kids to hang out with, more extracurricular activities to be involved in, and a heavier school work load. Since becoming freshmen, they have a little more decisions on the classes they take. They also begin to think about what they might be interested in after graduation.

When asked how high school is different from junior high Tucker Schieber said, "It's a lot different! There are more people you see throughout the day and you're not the top dog anymore, but it's not as hard as everyone says it is. It's just a little different getting used to, but I've had no problem".

The freshmen class are handling this year great and they plan to keep succeeding throughout the next three years of high school.

This year, the third grade is separated into two classes. One has 13 students and is taught by Mrs. Shelbi Luke. The other has 12 students and is taught by Mrs. Abbey Rankin. The third grade is excited to be moving up a grade and moving one year closer to their intermediate years.

They are working to improve their reading skills and to make their first major book report. Mrs. Abbey Rankin says the students are currently researching the solar system using computer activities, and they are very much enjoying it. Mrs. Shelbi Luke says, "We have really worked hard this year on having a positive mindset and believing we can all do hard things. I've enjoyed watching the students grow and realize what they are capable of doing with hard work."

Video Game Review: Sea of Thieves

By Evan Saxton
Staff Reporter

Sea of Thieves is a game about being a pirate with your friends. Hunting for treasure and following maps to make your riches allows you to really embrace your inner pirate. You can wait for others to complete their missions and when they go to sell their loot you board their ship and steal it. If you want, you can even sink their ship, teaching them the real pirate way. The more loot you steal, the more you can dress up your pirate and customize your ship to be bright and shiny showing your wealth, or ominous to show enemy pirates you mean business.

The best part about the game is you can sail the seas with your friends and do all your pirate schennangins together. You can commence pirate raids on strongholds around the map, giving you major amounts of loot, but with the cost of almost all of the players on the server coming to try to counter the raid and take the loot for themselves. This does lead to some of the best parts of the game, the combat, the fights you get into, be it on your ship shooting cannon balls or on the islands taking musket fire while charging with your sword, to claim the loot or protect it from others who try to do the same. That is what makes this game so fun and addicting to continue to play. This game embodies the fun you can have with your friends and why I love it so much, this can bring so much joy out of doing pretty much nothing but sailing the seas. This game is a treasure in itself.

Book Review

By Lydia Dokken
Staff Reporter

The book I read this month was Hideout by Watt Key. This book follows the story of a twelve year old boy who goes out on his boat hoping to find a dead body he's heard rumors about in order to prove his bravery to his father. Instead, he finds a boy his age living in an abandoned camp by the river. He brings the boy supplies he needs, and offers to take him back to his house, but the boy is insistent he not let anyone know he's living down there.

As the story unravels, so do plot twists I would have never expected, and chapters filled with action and suspense. I don't usually read mysteries so I had my doubts going in, but after sticking it out for a little while, the book began to get very interesting.

This book's strong point is its subversion of expectations (including my expectation that it would be boring). However, I feel the characters could be a little more three-dimensional if Watt Key wanted to write an amazing story instead of just a "good" one.

I'd give this book a 7/10, because despite having a good plot, the writing itself is only average.

Survey Results

Students in grades 7-12 were asked the question: What's the most insulting gift you could receive? 84 students responded.

Their options included: a gym membership, de-aging lotion, an empty box, coal, a scratched-off lottery ticket, or five dollars.

Do you like watching movies with your family on a free night? If you do, I have a good and funny movie for you to watch, Coffee and Kareem! This movie is for a more mature audience and not recommended for children.

The story line consists of a guy named Coffee, who is a cop dating Kareem's mom. Kareem is a 12 year old who is always getting into trouble at school, but is a funny guy. Kareem's mom wants Coffee to pick him up for school one day but then Coffee gets into some trouble with these bad people and someone dies, the cops think Coffee is the one who did it. We soon find out there are some bad cops in the system.

Coffee and Kareem go home but are followed and end up going to a motel. Coffee and Kareem don't really get along, but after this they rally together to prove to the cops it wasn't them. They end up figuring out the bad cop is a girl in their system. In the end, Coffee and Kareem lead the cops to a deal going down between the bad guys and the bad cop. Coffee ends up saving the day and he gets moved up in the police force, while Kareem wants Coffee to be a part of his family, so they stay together and get married.

I give this movie a 10/10 because I really enjoyed it and it is a good movie to watch as a teenager with your parents on a movie night.

Elementary counselor Mrs. Kali Newcomer's favorite homemade dessert is "all pie"!

"Strawberry pretzel salad" is high school principal Mrs. Lisa Craig's favorite dessert.

Wrestlers Face Tough Season

By Evan Saxton
Staff Reporter

This wrestling season has been one to remember. Facing off against bigger schools, while also having to deal with the precautions of Covid has led to challenges. The wrestlers do have a larger team than normal, meaning if someone is out due to Covid or injury then they will most likely have someone to fill the spot. Having such a big team leads to the boys wrestling off to get the weight class they want, meaning they have to earn it, making them wrestle better overall.

All of the boys and girls have worked their hardest to do their best for themselves and the team. They will attempt to make it as far as they can and, hopefully, we can see some of them qualify for state and wrestle for a title in their weight class. With less than a month left in the wrestling season it is exciting to see what else our team can accomplish before we finish off this weird, yet exciting wrestling season.

Stanberry Invitational Tournament

By Collin Sager
Staff Reporter

The 47th Annual Stanberry Tournament took place January 11th through the 16th as normally as possible. Fans from each school were limited, as has been the case the whole season due to Covid.

Both the Stanberry boys and girls teams won their first games by a pretty good margin. In their second matchup, the boys lost their game to a very talented Mound City team. The girls on the other hand won their game pretty easily versus Albany. These matchups landed the boys vying for the third place trophy and the girls playing in the championship game.

The boys played Saturday morning versus Platte Valley. The game was pretty close at the beginning but the Bulldogs pulled away at the end and won by 11 to take the third place trophy. The girls played right after the boys, also against Platte Valley. The game was a battle the whole time but the Bulldogs wouldn't quit and ended up losing a well fought battle, taking home the third place trophy. The Bulldogs travel this week to the King City tournament.

Third grader Quincy Cameron displays winter snowman drawing.

Artist of the Month

By Evan Saxton
Staff Reporter

January's Artists of the Month are third grader Quincy Cameron and sophomore Katelyn Stoll.

Quincy's artwork is a sign of the times. She has given us a watercolor snowman in disbelief that the winter winds have carried his hat away. Winter has already given us the ability to bring Quincy's watercolor to life in our own front yards. She has done a great job of capturing the snowman's emotions and the colors and brushstrokes really bring the drawing to life.

Katelyn has been working tirelessly at bringing her sketch to life. It is extremely hard to make eyes look real, and Katelyn has achieved this feat. Her attention to detail really allow us to feel like we are staring into someone's eye and into their soul. We look forward to seeing Katelyn bring her talent to life in a full face sketch.
